Classic Alishan Attractions

Alishan is not a single mountain, but a ridge of Yushan (Jade Mountain). The name, Alishan, appeared in Taiwan choreography, published in 1696. However, the origin of this name has already lost its trace in history. Alishan National Forest Recreation Area, located between Chiayi and Nantou, covers an area of 1,400 hectares with the main recreation site locating at about 2,000 to 2,700 meters above sea level. Alishan is world-famous for its five wonders, eight sights, and enriched forestry.

Visit the Amazing Eight Sights

Tashan Composed by a large number of odd-shaped rocks, Tashan is one of the most impressive landscapes in Alishan.

Xianglin Arch Bridge Surrounded by greenwoods and clear water, Xianglin arch bridge is full of Zen ambience.

No. 28 Giant Tree As the head among the giant trees, No. 28 Giant Tree has endemic plants such as Rhododendron kawakamii Hayata and Oleandra wallichii growing on it.

Shunyi Waterfall The running water embraces the towering trees.

Alishan sacred tree As a spiritual symbol in Alishan, the sacred tree was discovered in 1906 and was cut and laid in 1998.

Ciyun Temple Scenery A place for visitors to view the sea of clouds, the red clouds of evening, and the sunset while overlooking tribes and Tashan at the same time. Precious Taiwan cryptomerioides are found next to the temple. Standing erect for around 2,700 years, it presents amazing buris.

Shuishan Giant Tree Mt. Ogasawara It provides a destination for visitors to appreciate the five wonders as well as stars while overlooking magnificent landscapes of Jade Mountain and the Central Mountain Range.

Forestry History

In the early days, Alishan was one of the three major logging areas. With natural conservation awareness coming into focus, logging is highly restricted. Since then, Alishan has been developed based on environmental conservation and forest recreational facilities. Historical remains such as the Old Tree Stump, Lumber Collecting Post, and Tree Spirit Pagoda, and Alishan forest railway all vividly portray stories from early generations.

■ Cypress:The abundant rainfall and perennial mist have made Alishan an ideal place for cypress trees to grow. There are 36 cypress trees with the average age over 1,000 years along the two Giant Trees Plank Trails, creating a magnificent ambience. Thousand Year Cypress, a tree that is actually 2,000 years old with branches stretching like they are cheering for something. Xianglin Sacred Tree, a 2,300 years old cypress tree located next to the Ciyun Temple, is the most majestic tree in Alishan Forest Recreation Area.

■ Three Generation Tree:The three generations of this tree exist in the same trunk, symbolizing the inheritance of life.

■ Elephant Trunk Tree:An old cypress tree stump looks like elephant trunk.

■ Forest Railway:The zigzagging Alishan Forest Railway, originally constructed for logging, has already been in operation for over a century. Visitors can take this famous narrow-gauge train from Chiayi station. It rises from an elevation of only 30 meters above sea level to a height of over 2,000 meters. As it approaches the mountains, the track follows a circuitous route through an arboreal environment that changes from tropical to frigid zone species. Leading every visitor to the forest, hiking trails, and mountains, it is considered a significant cultural asset.

■ Lumber Collecting Post:Standing erect next to the logging machine, it was common to use lumber collectors, lumber collecting posts, and cableways to deliver the wood in the early days.

■ Tree Spirit Pagoda:Tree Spirit Pagoda is a 20m tall stone structure built in 1935 to commemorate and soothe the spirits of the trees that were cut down during the logging industry. The circular steps under the pagoda signify the growth rings of the tree and the pagoda represents the trunk of the tree.

■ Alishan Museum:Alishan Museum, a cypress building built in 1935, has 'Government-General of Taiwan-District Office' on its truss. After the restoration in 2013, it is turned into a Timber Industry Exhibition Hall displaying the forest railway and logging relics. There are also locomotives displayed including steam engines used on Alishan Railway and different firewood engines used in different eras. It has already become a must-not-miss attraction for visitors to learn more about the centennial forestry in Alishan.

■ Dr. Kawa Memorial Monument:This monument was erected in 1933 to pay tribute to Dr. Kawa Ichitaro for his contribution to the forestry industry. It is classified as a historical site in Chiayi County.

Natural Ecology

There are a huge variety of flowers and trees inside Alishan National Forest Recreation Area, such as cherry trees, Pleione formosana (Taiwan pleione), Magnolia, Rhododendron, Hydrangea macrophylla, Crocsmia x crocosmiiflora (Crocus Tritonia), Alocasia macrorrhizos, Bellis perennis (Daisy), and Wisteria floribunda. Alishan Forest Recreation Area comes alive in a profusion of floral colors in spring and summer. When it comes to autumn and winter, this area is embraced by fascinating gold and bright red blossoms of Acer morrisonense (Taiwan red maple), Acer serrulatum (Green maple), and Ginkgo biloba (Maidenhair tree).

In addition to abundant natural resources, Alishan, known an ideal venue to observe middle- and high-altitude birds, has attracted a large number of overseas scholars and explorers from early days. Common bird species in this area include Yuhina brunneiceps (Formosan Yuhina), Parus monticolus (Green-backed Tit), Heterophasia auricularis (White-eared Sibia), Tarsiger johnstoniae (Collared Bush Robin), and Syrmaticus mikado (Mikado Pheasant), making this place a paradise for bird enthusiasts.

■ Alishan Eco-Education Center 、 Taiwan Pleione Formosana Story House 、
The Alishan Salamander Exhibit Hall

Those places display Alishan's significant events since 1896, relevant researchers' life stories, cultural relics, seed genes database, and animal and plant models for visitors to follow stories at different times. It also displays conservation procedures and results regarding The Alishan Salamander and Taiwan Pleione Formosana.

Train the strength of your legs

Climb to the top of Tashan
After reaching the summit, visitors are able to overlook the magnificent landscapes of Jade Mountain and Central Mountain Range, Alishan National Forest Recreation Area, and cloud waterfalls or sea of clouds.

Scenery of Mt. Ogasawara
Visitors can also roam around Zhushan Forest Road, Duegaoyue Trail, and the Alpine Botanical Garden.

Mt. Ogasawara is a must-not-miss destination for bird and mountain enthusiasts. Surrounded by the luxuriant forest, there are a variety of plants along the road where visitors can enjoy a fascinating view of cherry blossom, Magnolia virginiana (magolia), Rhododendron (Indian Azalea), and Bellis perennis (daisy) in spring. Moreover, this place is also an ideal destination for visitors to watch the sunrise, evening glow, and stars other than overlooking the majestic peaks.

The Alpine Botanical Garden has plants that were named after Alishan. Taiwan White Fir along the Duegaoyue Trail creates a gorgeous view for visitors to explore. Standing on the Duegaoyue cliff, visitors can overlook tribes in Xinyi Township. There are also Acer morrisonense Hayata (Taiwan Red Maple) next to the Duegao Pavilion.

Poetry-chanting atmosphere

Alishan Poetry Road
Poems from thirteen well-known poets including Zheng Chou-yu, Yu Guang-zhong, and others were carved on monuments inside Zhaoping park. The barrier-free Cherry Trail provides the best location for visitors to appreciate the majestic view of Tashan. During the flowering season in spring, visitors are able to enjoy the spectacular view of flower blossoms. Visitor can also stop by Zhaoping Station, famous for its wooden retro-style architectural feature.
